TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN,

My name is Brittany, and I am very excited to apply for the Web Application Engineer position. While I am currently finishing my bachelor's degree in Information Science with a concentration in Human-Computer Interaction at Northeastern University, I am very interested in joining Spotify after graduation. It is clear from this job description that Spotify is looking for an enthusiastic and well-rounded front-end developer to help build responsive, data-rich web applications. Given my engineering experience with teams at MullenLowe, Starry, and Apple Music, I believe that I am a great match for this role.

My strength as a front-end engineer is my ability to bridge engineering with design. I am well-versed at building responsive, user-friendly web applications using JavaScript, CSS, and HTML, and love learning about the ever-changing realm of web technologies. I recently finished an internship as a UI Engineer at Apple, where I built and shipped several customer-facing web applications for Apple Music. I believe my experience with and knowledge of the unique music subset of the tech industry makes me an excellent candidate for this position.

I want to work for a company that I believe in, and most importantly, care about. This is something I really see the potential for at Spotify. Even when working with Apple Music, I found myself using Spotify's product every day for its cross-platform compatibility and intuitive, multi-faceted venues for music discovery. It would be an amazing opportunity to contribute to these technologies that impact the way the world experiences music.

After reviewing my application, I hope that you will agree that I am an ideal candidate for the Web Application Engineer role. I look forward to learning more about how my skills and experiences can help me contribute to new technologies at Spotify. Please get in touch with me regarding this opportunity at brittany.chiang@gmail.com. I would love to join the band.

Thank you so much for your consideration, and I hope to hear from you soon!

Sincerely,

BRITTANY CHIANG
